After graduating from college, Sean Aiken know he would need to find a job soon. The problem was that he wasn't sure what kind of work he wanted to do.

One night at the dinner table, his father encouraged him to do what he liked most. His father said he had worked his whole life doing a job he didn't really enjoy. Aiken wanted a different future. That night, he promised himself that he would find something that he was passionate about.

Aiken set a goal to work a new job each week for a year, That's 54 jobs in one year. And he did it! One week, as a dairy farmer, he milked cows every morning. Then, in another week, he was an astronomer studying the night sky. Aiken's favorite job, however, was teaching. He learned he was happiest when he was helping others.

Aiken also learned that it's OK not to know what you want to do right away. He wrote a book about his experiences. and today he tells his story to college and university students. His message? you'll find your perfect job one day. After all, Aiken found his/Diamonds have many special qualities. They're the hardest material on Earth. They sparkle in the light. Some are incredibly expensive. But could a diamond bring 300 years of bad luck?

In 1668, the French royal family bought a large diamond from India. It became known as the "French Blue." When King Louis XVI and his wife were put to death in 1797, some people linked their deaths with the diamond's curse. (However, two earlier kings had worn the diamond and not had bad luck.)

The Hope family bought the diamond in the 1830s. Soon after, Francis Hope's wife left him and he had to sell the diamond because of financial problems. The diamond then became known as the Hope Diamond.

Millionaire Evalyn McLean loved jewelry and stories of bad luck. In 1911, she had the opportunity to buy the Hope Diamond. Afterwards, two of her children died, and her husband became ill.

In 1958, a mailman named James Todd brought the diamond to its present home at the Smithsonian Institution. Soon after, his wife died and his house burned down.
