After graduating from college, Sean Aiken know he would need to find a job soon. The problem was that he wasn't sure what kind of work he wanted to do.

One night at the dinner table, his father encouraged him to do what he liked most. His father said he had worked his whole life doing a job he didn't really enjoy. Aiken wanted a different future. That night, he promised himself that he would find something that he was passionate about.

Aiken set a goal to work a new job each week for a year. That's 54 jobs in one year. And he did it! One week, as a dairy farmer, he milked cows every morning. Then, in another week, he learned he was happiest when he was helping others.

Aiken also learned that it's OK not to know what you want to do right away. He wrote a book about his experiences, and today he tells his stor to college and university students. His message? you'll find your perfect fob one day. After all, Aiken found his.

Luckily, I don't live in Bath but nearly ten miles away in a village called Limpley Stoke in the Avon Valley, It seems to be normal in the countryside these days for professional people who work in the town to prefer to live in the villages, this makes the housing so expensive that the willagers and agricultural workers have to live in the cheaper accommodation in town, with the result that the farmers commute out to the farm and everyone else commutes in. Certainly there is no one in the village who could be called an old-style villager. The people nearest to me include a pilot, an accountant, a British Rail manager, and a retired French teacher, There is not a farm worker among them. But I don't think there is anything wrong with that - it is just that the nature of villages is changing and there is still quite a strong sense of community here.

- 47- Why does the author mention "luckily" in the first line?
- 1) To compare the conditions of living in the town and a remote village
 - 2) To highlight the benefits of living in a village, which is ten miles away from the town
 - 3) To show that living in the village allows him to escape the problems of living in the town
 - 4) To provide a hint in support of the fact that he has no problem with the changing nature of the villages
- 48- Housing is expensive because of
- 1) the shortage of housing in the town
 - 2) the professionals working in the village
 - 3) the agricultural workers working on the farms
 - 4) those with professions preferring to live in the villages
- 49- The people who live in the village
- 1) commute to the farms
 - 2) don't like the old-style villagers
 - 3) are unable to buy houses in the town
 - 4) are mostly professionals who work in the town
- 50- Despite the change in the basi quality of the villages, the writer thinks that
- 1) there should also be a farm worker among them.
 - 2) it is a good place for farm workers to make money
 - 3) people still share the common values and have close relationships
 - 4) living there is not enjoyable and will be boring with the passage of time
