I believe children should respect their parents. Billy Graham said "A child who is allowed to be disrespectful to his parents will not have true respect for anyone." Children imagine their parents have everything the world has to offer, and that they are there to serve their wish. Every child needs to realize that sometimes parents have a responsibility that they don't see. They try their hardest to support their families and don't need a child causing stress to their everyday lives.

A large number of my friends have explained how they "love their parents so much" yet they cause them a considerable amount of sadness with their unacceptable behavior. Many can't look past their own "problems" to give their parents the respect they deserve. On occasion some of my friends had such rude behavior without paying any mind to the guests that stand before them.

When I see my friends acting like this, I know I must try my best to never act in such a horrible manner. I have taken to the heart the lessons my parents have taught me, and I know I will follow them for the rest of my life. I have taught myself to be kind to others and to be aware of the stresses of being an adult.

All the children, no matter what age, should try to consider their parents and adults in their lives. They should try to lend a hand around the house and take on some of their parents loads. Soon enough they will be adults and parents faced with the same worries. Be mindful to your parents and give the love they deserve for trying their hardest. Be a respectful person and take on the responsibilities your parents have been trying to teach you. The first step to kindness should be the love you will give to your parents.
